Operational evidence

Supplier invoices and receiving records show more expensive replenishment and purchases above COGS. November adds $2.65m inventory; December adds $5.4m. The December $18m of purchases comprises $15m goods cost and $3m inbound freight. Of the month's $12.6m COGS, $1.8m is inbound freight embedded in goods sold; $1.2m of that month's freight remains in closing inventory. That remaining amount is not a second expense. No write-down has been booked; management must still monitor aging and realizable value.

Customer collections trail recognized sales by $1m in each month, increasing receivables from $10m to $12m. There are no write-offs, returns, factoring proceeds or FX movements. Purchases and operating costs shown were paid in the month, leaving payables at $8m. Higher landed costs and replenishment can explain separate margin and cash pressures; the external note alone did not establish these amounts.

Cash, interest and actual LTM components

Total bank cash on December 31 is $11.806250m, of which $2.00000m is restricted. The attached reconciliation identifies $9.806250m eligible cash. The finance officer learned the finalized cash and operating results on January 15 at 9 am. This January 19 delivery also serves as the C08 financial-failure notice and C04 operating notice. No lender default notice, waiver or cure acknowledgment had been received by this report's cutoff. Debt remains $50.00000m. Scheduled interest was paid on November 30 and December 31. Cash taxes follow the original installment calendar, separately from income-tax expense.

January-September 2026 actual components: revenue $180.000000m, landed COGS $108.000000m and other operating costs $45.000000m. Add October from 06 and November-December above for the complete actual LTM schedule. No add-backs are approved. The lender must apply C02 using these actual components and eligible cash.

Initial thirteen-week forecast and action plan

The January 15 forecast assumes continued costly replenishment, existing supplier commitments and slower customer collections. It assumes no financing or lender waiver. Projected week-end Unrestricted Cash is below. Each amount already excludes restricted cash and includes operating payments, interest, cash tax and capital expenditure. Initial activity from January 1 is included; the schedule starts from the latest observed December balance. The report delivers the forecast under C05. Forecasts are not bank balances.

Management will review supplier purchase pacing, receivables collections and inventory sell-through and deliver Friday refreshes. No signed savings or deferral existed at the January 15 cutoff. No new discretionary expansion, distribution or additional borrowing was entered. The original agreement remains in force.
